USPA NEWS - President Emmanuel Macron arrives this morning very early, at 8:15 a.m., this Thursday, (11:15 p.m.) in Nouméa, today. At the end of a series of meetings between loyalists and separatists, the president promised not to "forcibly" pass the constitutional reform at the origin of violent riots in New Caledonia, giving the parties "a few weeks of more to negotiate" a global political agreement demanding above all a return to order.

President Macron has committed to providing a progress update "within a month", thus seeming to delay a final vote on electoral reform, provided however that order is restored. We publish the list of measures announced by the Overseas Ministries and the Ministry of Economy and Finance,
